AgriBusiness Forum 2018
Conclusions & Conference Report

Key outcome: Agrifood synergies in education, science, business and public sector, is the only way towards productive, innovative and sustainable agriculture in Greece
"The future of Greek and European agriculture in the digital era" was dynamically debated between the 235 delegates of the AgriBusiness 2018, held in Serres, Greece, 1-3 November 2018. The conference successfully gave floor to agribusiness leaders, from education, science, business and public sector that identified trends, assessed implications and reviewed the resulting challenges and policy options while confronted decision-makers for the near-future Greek agriculture.

AgriBusiness Forum was attended by 235 delegates from Greece and abroad among which producers, leading and innovative businesses, research and educational institutions, academia, financial services, interlocutors and public sector. Participants analyzed trends, identified challenges, presented innovative tools and exchanged views on how to modernize through digitization and digital transformation the production, processing and distribution of agricultural products with high added value in Greece and the wider region.
Delegates and media endorsed AgriBusiness Forum as the best ever agtech & agrifood event in Greece thanks to the high quality of speakers, the content-driven sessions and its parallel networking and training activities. These activities included the Masterclass, a workshop for agri-entrepreneurs, the Hellenic Challenge, a pitch contest with prizes, a field visit provided knowledge on geothermy, as well as ample networking opportunities between leaders and experts in the Greek and European agricultural industry.

HE Caspar Veldkamp, Ambassador of the Netherlands

Mr. Giannis Balakakis, Chair, AgriBusiness Forum

Key message of the AgriBusiness Forum 2018 is the necessity for fast adoption and implementation of cross-sectoral synergies in the agri-food value chain, being the only viable solution for a productive, innovative and sustainable agriculture in Greece. Forum’s seven interactive sessions (CAP in Greece & the EU post-2020, Financial Instruments, New Technologies & AgriDistribution Logistics, Smart Plant Farming, Smart Livestock Farming, Industry & Academia synergies) formed serious building blocks in exchanging and debating information.

Key Takeaways:

- Synergies and partnerships across the agri-food value chain in order to reduce agricultural products’ production, processing and distribution costs;
- Connectivity between education, research and market-players for producing products of high added value;
- Medium- and long-term branding & marketing, focusing on a permanent and inclusive approach at country, product and label basis;
- Onsite training and capacity building in order producers should be in position adopting new technologies towards reaching best planning and products optimization;
- Supporting innovative companies (scaleups) about creating products or services of high added value;
- Consolidating agricultural representation to a single-powerful hub in order addressing the interests and strengthening agri-sector’s messages at national, regional and international level.

During AgriBusiness Forum 2018, all major banking lenders in Greece (National Bank, Piraeus Bank, Alpha Bank, Eurobank), as well as the European Investment Fund (EIF), the European Bank for Reconstruction & Development (EBRD) and micro-lender MicroSTARS have announced that it will be soon available targeted funding instruments meeting the needs of the local agri-food industry.
